Bluetooth Adapter for Keyboard & Mouse How it works (click to enlarge) BT-500 main features: Based on Bluetooth 4.0 (a.k.a Bluetooth Low Energy or BLE) with reduction in power consumption and fast connection time. Works with ALL host types: Apple Mac, iPhone/iPad, Android phones and tablets, all versions of Windows and most others. Hosts must support Bluetooth 4.0 (BT 5.x is backward compatible with 4.x) Hosts must support Bluetooth keyboard and/or mouse. Some low end Android phones/tablets have Bluetooth supporting only hands-free headset but not keyboard/mouse. For Windows: must be Windows 8 or up, Windows 7 and down do not support BT 4.0 See this Microsoft Page. Compatible with all types of USB keyboards including those with a built-in hub (e.g., Happy Hacking, DAS, Apple, Dell, etc.) and keyboard/trackball combos (in that case both keyboard and trackball will work) For keyboards with a built-in hub, other devices connected to the hub will not work Also works with many keyboard emulating USB devices such as barcode scanners, RFID readers, magnetic strip readers and foot pedals. Support of USB mice. Scroll wheel also works No pin-code pairing: does not require a pin code to pair a host Command line interface to customize many features Configurable keep-alive feature: periodically sending out key strokes to keep host from falling into sleep or network connection from timing out. Wireless status LED (Blue) and host port status LED (Green) Power is passed from USB device (male) port directly to USB host (female) port. FCC and CE certified. Review by our customers (thanks to all of you). The DIY projects below use the previous version of the Adapter (with a built-in battery). The smaller size and flexibility to use a battery bank make the new adapter more suitable for such projects. Double Commitments: (1) We will investigate any case of incompatibility you report and provide free replacement until the issue is fixed; (2) you can return the adapter for full refund including S&H within 6 months of purchase for any reason. If you have communicated with us about an issue, then there is no time limit for the return. The returned unit can be in any condition, e.g., without original package, damaged, burnt (in that case we just need the ash back :-). Price: $39.95. Due to high demand and global component shortages, this product is temporarily out of stock. We expect it be back in stock on or before September 1 2022. This is our key product so people can be rest assured its long term availability. We appreciate everybody's patience and understanding. Just received this this morning, been using it for about an hour and feel confident delivering my first thoughts I had a previous keyboard similar to this. That product lasted about 6 months before failing. I am confident that this one will last much longer. By comparison, this product is much sturdier and heavier, the material feels to be of a better quality. The touchpad is lightly textured, so you are aware you are touching it without looking at the product. The individual buttons are made of a gripping material that even if your hands get sweaty, as they do when gaming, your fingers don't slide across and fumble the keys while in a sensitive PvP situation. My two complaints are that the directional buttons and media controls should be reversed. As a right handed individual it feels unnatural to be using my left hand to be making adjustments when typing and editing comments, although I suppose I am quickly getting used to it, also I do not like the dual finger drag for scrolling. It hops back up a little bit when you remove your fingers. On a small dialogue box like this review section, you have to scroll way below the section you are aiming for, and it becomes a guessing game. Yes, I can edit the size of the dialogue box, but games generally do not have that option for their chats. The previous handheld keyboard I had used a raised line on the right side of the touchpad that you lightly ran your thumb down, and I feel that that was a much better implementation. It came well packaged and protected, with no wiggle room inside the box. The instructions are clear and easy to use - it is obvious from some of the wording and tense errors that this is a foreign made product, but the team put in actual effort to have their instructions be understandable by English speakers, which is really nice. I have been using it straight out of the box for close to an hour and a half, two hours, with the phasing LED option and the battery is working just fine. Buttons are very well marked, clear and concise even when using colors like blue and purple, in bright or low lights. I am very pleased with this product, and if my earlier caveats do not bother you, I suggest you purchase this product!
